Arla Vox is emerging in the explosive yet unique space where mainstream pop has embraced Latin influence and Urban sounds like never before. Her smooth yet energetic vocals are precisely what gives this new era of Latin music its redefined edge and desirability.

Her 2020 single, Receta de Amor, is an eclectic blend where Latin pop meets tropical Urban elements. A follow up to that is her second studio single, Por Ahi Voy, released on September 12th 2021.

She has further legitimized herself when she became a Top 24 finalist on an internationally televised singing competition, Reina de la Cancion, a production of Univision Network that aired in October of 2019. Led by some of the most predominant names in the Latin music industry such as Daddy Yankee, Sergio George, Pedro Capo, Natti Natasha and Olga Tañón.

Arla Vox was born in Mexico City. At three years old her family emigrated to the United States. Although her grandfather is a US Citizen, her story is reminiscent to that of many other young immigrants living in the US.
